

Family & Domestic Violence Policy.

All States.

AGL Telecommunications.

1. We're here to support you.

If there's an immediate threat to your safety, call emergency 000.

We're committed to supporting all customers who are experiencing or are impacted by family & domestic violence.

Australians are increasingly relying on the phone and internet which can be a lifeline, but at the same time, telecommunications products and services can also be used to compound abuse as a tool of control. The financial hardship often facing those escaping a violent situation can impact their access to phone and internet services.

This policy is for all customers who are experiencing, or have experienced, family & domestic violence. We'll provide a supportive and confidential environment where you can inform us of your situation and seek the support you need.

2. What is Family & Domestic Violence?

Family & domestic violence can take many forms, and can involve the following:

Technology facilitated abuse:

- monitoring phone calls, social media and emails, or loading spyware onto a computer or mobile phone, without the knowledge and approval of someone;
- using technology to track the location of someone, for the purposes of monitoring, control or stalking. Parental monitoring and security services can be used for these purposes; and
- making repeated phone calls, sending text messages or leaving messages on social media in breach of court intervention orders or apprehended domestic violence orders.

Access to telecommunications account:

- logging in (without permission) and closing services, thereby cutting someone off from their contacts;
- monitoring account activity, including information on phone bills and data usage; and
- fraudulently accessing the personal details of someone, such as new contact details, and continuing harassment or abuse with this new information.

Financial abuse via telecommunications account:

- putting a service in the sole name of someone through fraud or coercion, and then through this putting them into debt;
- being an end user or authorised representative of the telecommunications account and using the service in a way that creates a financial obligation on someone without their permission; and
- cancelling the telecommunications service of someone if or when they try to leave.

3. Specialised Staff who can help you

You will always be treated with respect and dignity whenever you interact with us. Our staff have undergone specialised training to help understand and respond to family & domestic violence.

So we can best support you, we invite you to communicate with us about your context. This can be by any method you feel comfortable with and you'll find our contact details at the end of this policy and on our website. You may want to nominate someone to contact us on your behalf. This may include:

- someone you would like to appoint as your authorised representative (like a social worker, legal aid representative, family member or friend);
- advocate (like an interpreter, family member or friend who assists with communication); or
- financial counsellor or someone who helps you manage your bills.

Let us know who your support person or authorised representative is when we speak with you and provide consent for them to act on your behalf. With your approval, we'll engage with them as we would with you, consistent with your consent, instructions and in line with our privacy obligations.

We'll check with you how you wish to proceed, including the following:

- removing the perpetrator as an authorised representative on your account;
- putting additional account security measures on your account, including assigning a code word to your account to prevent unauthorised access by the perpetrator;
- requesting an investigation into a life threatening or unwelcome call or message, or conducting call tracing;
- setting up a new account in your own name;
- transferring your mobile number under your name (although the account is not in your name);
- determining what notes to include in your file;
- confirming with you, your preferred method of communication so that we send information to you in a safe way;
- assisting you with payment difficulties, in line with our Financial Hardship Policy; and
- helping you connect with support services that may be better placed to respond to your unique circumstances.

We may require some documentation from you, for example before we transfer your mobile number to your name.

4. Account Security

We take our customer's privacy and protecting their personal information seriously. We manage this information in line with the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) and the Australian Privacy Principles. You can view a copy of our Privacy Policy on our website at <https://www.agl.com.au/privacy-policy>.

How we handle your information

If you tell us you're experiencing family & domestic violence, we'll provide you with personalised assistance to support your safety.

We're focused on keeping your information secure and will talk with you about suitable options to protect your information.
